4.11 – Attendance Policy

The University is in session throughout the year except for holidays and vacations as listed on the academic calendar. For the purposes of Title IV, Hodges University is an institution not required to take attendance. However, for the purposes of census-date recording and financial aid reporting, students that do not attend the first week of class of the session will be administratively withdrawn from the course, and from the session unless the student is concurrently registered for and attending any additional course. In addition, for the purposes of student retention and academic success, attendance is taken weekly.

Students enrolled at Hodges University are required to regularly attend and actively participate in classes regardless of whether attendance or participation is factored into a student's final grade. Individual instructors also may impose additional attendance and participation requirements in their courses over and above the institution's standard requirements. Students should consult the course syllabus for information about requirements that apply to individual courses. In all cases, it is important for students to be aware that changes to the student's course schedule may affect eligibility for federal and/or financial aid funding.
